IJN SOUND AND FURY PLATOON

While the Imperial Japanese Navy might not possess the sheer wealth of bodies enjoyed by its enemies in the SSU and Allied forces, it more than makes up for it with technological prowess. Every platform they employ has the ability to carry some level of railgun technology, with their land-based tanks being the newest to join the frontlines.

A terrifying view of what happens when next generation technology is married to time-tested engineering, the IJN military machine only has to strike once to achieve victory.

PLATOON ADVANTAGE: SURGICAL ASSAULT

After her return to Imperial Japan, Kaori was given the task of putting the IJN's newest weapon advancements through their paces.

Following a successful attack (damage is inflicted) by Kaori on a unit, the Byakko Medium Tank belonging to this platoon immediately activates at the end of Kaori's activation. One of the Byakko's actions must be an attack or sustained attack action against the same target Kaori successfully attacked.

SUPPORT UNITS

Usually called upon by other forces within the IJN military structure, the Sound and Fury Platoon relies upon its relatively small size to glass hammer its way through its targets. The Genbu Type 113 Medium Walker is prized for its ability to provide smoke cover to better obscure Kaori's camouflaged advance. Similarly, any Ninja Squads possessing smoke grenades would serve a similar outcome for Kaori and her platoon.
